immense pride in his performance. Bartow boys head basketball coach Terrence McGriff highlighted the collective excitement felt within the community, which has rallied behind the championship.

Bartow is behind him 100%, he stated, capturing the heartfelt encouragement that resonates throughout the town.

From Humble Beginnings to NBA Glory

Born on January 19, Bradley grew up in Bartow and quickly made a name for himself on the basketball court. He earned distinction as a McDonald's All-American while playing for Bartow High School before moving on to the University of North Carolina (UNC), where he was part of the 2017 NCAA championship team. His choice of UNC over other big names like Kansas and Florida showcases his commitment to excellence from an early age. Despite moments of hardship that tested his resolve, Bradley persevered, refusing to let challenges deter him from his NBA dreams.

After being selected 28th overall by the Los Angeles Lakers in the 2017 NBA Draft, he found his way to the Utah Jazz and eventually a rollercoaster of team changes, including stints with the Philadelphia 76ers and Chicago Bulls. Despite a lengthy journey filled with ups and downs, Bradley always kept his head high, staying true to his values, which his father, Tony Bradley, Sr., describes as marked by humility and hard work.

A Game Forward for the Pacers

As the Indiana Pacers strive for cinching their place as NBA champions, the pressure mounts. They need just two more wins, giving Bradley an exciting opportunity to capture not only a personal milestone but a moment of triumph for his hometown as well. With impassioned dedications from the local water tower proudly announcing, "Bartow — Home of Champions," the town is rallying behind their hero as he prepares for Game Six at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday.
